INTRODUCTION

During the years of independence, we have observed great changes in the socio-political and legal life of our country. The main goal of the reforms being carried out in our country is to build a prosperous and prosperous life for our people. Ensuring human rights and freedoms in society, the development of legal knowledge and skills of citizens, and the formation of a person who knows the essence of the Constitution, which is our basic law, and has complied with it have become a priority.

Today, Uzbekistan is gaining prestige in the world community as one of the developing countries. Citizens of our society, especially young people, are a great force in further developing this process. It is known that our state aims to build a free civil society and a democratic state based on the rule of law. In achieving this goal, the state acts in accordance with the Constitution. Given the important role of the Constitution in the development of man and society, in the establishment of the rule of law, it is necessary to understand the principles of the Constitution and its importance in everyday life in the creation of human life and the future. In order to function freely in life, one must have a deep knowledge of the essence of the Constitution, pay great attention to the development of one's legal knowledge by studying the norms of the Constitution. It should be noted that the Constitution reflects the democratic system of our free country. Knowing it and following it is the key to the development of our country as a strong state governed by the rule of law. A person who does not know the Constitution cannot fulfill his laws and duties. A deep understanding of the norms of the Constitution, along with ensuring a happy future, allows a person to be honored as the highest value in life.

Article 13 of the Constitution of the Republic of Uzbekistan stipulates that democracy is based on universal values and that the highest value is the human person and his life, liberty, honor, dignity and other inalienable rights. Thanks to independence, Uzbekistan attaches great importance to human freedom, the unity of society and the state, and the role of man in the restoration of universal values and the establishment of civil society. In addition, the formation of legal culture in the life of man and society is very important today. The legal culture of a society is seen as a type of social culture that reflects a certain level of legal consciousness, legitimacy, improvement of the law, and legal experience, and embraces all the riches that human beings have created in the field of law. The legal culture of a society is the basis for ensuring individual freedom, security, human rights, and social activism. On this basis, by cultivating a legal culture in society, it is possible to provide employment to a wide range of young people, especially unorganized youth, to lead them to greater goals, protect their rights and interests, and prevent various crimes and conflicts among young people. The legal culture of the individual is an integral part of the legal culture of society, and this activity is in line with the development of society and its culture in the field of constitution and law and allows for permanent legal enrichment of the individual and society. Undoubtedly, the high culture of the individual is also the key to development.

Article 18 of the Basic Law states that "In the Republic of Uzbekistan, all citizens have the same rights and freedoms and are equal before the law, regardless of gender, race, nationality, language, religion, social origin, beliefs, personal and social status. Privileges shall be established only by law and shall be in accordance with the principles of social justice." Based on this article, a person should be encouraged to live in a society based on the principle of equality.

Strengthening our independence also depends on our trust in each other, respect for our rights and our determination to have a bright future. As the first President said: "Uzbekistan has a great future. It is an independent, democratic, legal state. It is a state based on the principles of humanity, which guarantees the rights and freedoms of its citizens, regardless of their nationality, religion, social status, or political beliefs." In such a society, the Constitution serves as a legal guarantee for the independent activity of the people.

At present, it is desirable to further develop education on the rights and freedoms of young people. It is necessary to pay more attention to the growing demand for legal culture and legal consciousness in our country, to increase the constitutional and legal knowledge of young people, as well as to educate the younger generation to recognize their rights, and rely on their strengths and abilities. It is necessary to increase the importance of the Constitution and laws in the lives of young people, who are the leading force in society, to integrate them with the process of spiritual renewal of society, to strengthen their spiritual, moral, legal and educational work. In today's complex life, young people need to be able to solve various problems in a positive way, to develop their free-thinking skills. It would be expedient to study the experience of advanced countries in promoting the legal and social activity of the youth of the Republic, the culture of free and independent thinking, to provide the media with extensive information on political and legal issues. Therefore, in addition to the educational process, it is necessary to create a creative environment for such young people, to analyze and study their educational and scientific-educational activities, and to deepen their knowledge of the constitution and socio-law. The study of the Constitution and its application to the lives of young people should be used not only in educational institutions but also in the fields of culture, art, literature, sports and other organizations. Through this work, it will be possible to protect the rights and interests of young people, to bring them up as harmoniously developed individuals.

In conclusion, it should be noted that the large-scale reforms being carried out in our country serve to form a democratic state based on the rule of law. It should not be forgotten that it is a sacred civic duty of every person growing up in our country to contribute to this work and work hard for the prosperity of the Motherland.
